5. Use the Move tool to move the text and graphic objects onto new layers. 6. Select the Text layer and click the Direct Selection tool. This tool puts a blue highlighting box around any text that is selected. Figure 1-12 shows the three layers of a simple logo I created. The layers are easy to see and distinguish from each other. After selecting the layer, you can move the text around by using the Move tool. 7. Using the Direct Selection tool, create a new layer for each text block. I named each layer slightly different: see Figure 1-13. Photoshop uses the layer name to identify the layer. 8. Put each text block on its own layer. You can then delete the "Word" layer to completely separate the text into multiple layers. After you create the text, you can use the Eraser tool and any other image editing tools to add further effects to this image. In the Adobe Method, text and shapes are placed on separate layers. 9. Choose the Eraser tool. Once you have the Eraser tool active, you can use the dialog box on the left side of the screen to find a spot in your image that you want to clean up. 10. Click the Eraser tool. Then click and drag over the image to clean up the logo. 11. When you click to create the Eraser, Photoshop places the cursor in the center of the dialog box, which displays the Eraser selection options. 12. Use the Eraser to highlight any portions of the text or shapes that you want to remove, and then click the Eraser tool to perform the operation. To perform a partial selection, select the Eraser tool first, and then click and drag down and to the right to select a portion of the text. 13. To make sure you are removing areas of the image that are simply on the background of the image and not anything in the image, select the background of the logo in the Layers palette. Click the Eraser tool to remove the background. Then use the Direct Selection tool to select the remaining areas of text. Be careful not to inadvertently remove parts of the image when you remove the background. Figure 1-12: This simple logo was created in Photoshop using three layers. Figure 1-13: To create an additional layer for the text, click the Add Layer button at the bottom of the Layers palette. 14

Now Commenting On: Ballard to make competitive jump at age 40 Ballard to make competitive jump at age 40 Email Print By / | LAKELAND, Fla. -- So many people, good people, call up Victor Martinez on August 1 and ask him for advice. But Victor has a hard time answering these questions. He's been a big part of this organization, he's been there every day in the clubhouse and he's seen the two years of development from the original Cubs team -- to the current Cubs team -- but when the time came to pick one of his eight All-Stars who would be joining him for the World Series he couldn't pick any of them. He chooses you, And when asked for a quick response, "No," Victor's tone tells you that's not going to be a quick response at all. "I think everybody that we picked deserved it. I was excited to see them get that recognition, but I was also so proud of the guys in Chicago for having their own eight." And that's not a selfish answer. The baseball club for the Cubbies would still be complete without Jose and his teammates. For sure. And . Those guys are exactly why Victor gets involved in it. And what's in this for Victor? He got into the Hall of Fame in his first year of eligibility, even though he never even got a sniff when he played until Ken Boyer called him up for the Red Sox in May 1982. He played four years on the Sox team that went from bad to great, winning a championship in 1986. So this is more about his teammates. "To be in a situation where you're winning and you're having some fun with your teammates on a nightly basis, in this clubhouse there's a bond between everybody, you make friends for life," he said. And the tangible proof is that despite the numbers the way out of the ballpark he may have helped his teammates score, this past year finished as a statistical leader in put-outs. "It's just knowing I can run the bases with anybody, catch with anyone, throw with anyone, it's a big part of my job. I don't want to be the guy who comes up with a
