How to compare on date conversion properly? My goal is to show if an entity was active or not (Either the user was last online or not). The current approach I'm using is to use AspNetUserLogins and to convert the datetime to a local time. The conversion is done like this: DateTime? lastOnline = User.Logins.Find(userLogin.ID).Login; DateTime? lastActive = DateTime.UtcNow; DateTime? lastActiveLocal = TimeZoneInfo.ConvertTimeBySystemTimeZoneId(lastActive, userLogin.TimeZoneId); now it's working. What happens is: If the timezone is in the same timezone then lastActiveLocal is always more than lastOnline. As the system was last online on the previous day, the user should be visible in the search.. Is there any way around this. I hope to get a better solution. A. I assume that you are using a stored procedure to query for active logins. I haven't tested, but I can't see why this shouldn't work. You'll want to store the UTC time in the database. Then when you query for active logins: int year = Year(lastOnline); int month = Month(lastOnline); int day = Day(lastOnline); int hour = Hour(lastOnline); int minute = Minute(lastOnline); int second = second(lastOnline); DateTime utcLastActive = DateTime.SpecifyKind(DateTime.UtcNow, DateTimeKind.Utc)
