Sneaky Yak is a top down fantasy market strategy game. You play as a fantasy merchant trying to make your store what your customers want. Your items start off in your store but you must go around the world and purchase them. The game uses a simple turn based system similar to the quiz bizz. Each city, town, or small village has a few needs based on the flow of money. Just like other market games, each item will have a sell/buy value in each location based on what is locally needed or wanted. The goods that are locally needed will go first, but if you sell something too cheap, then you'll find that you have no customers. Each year your income will increase and your costs will decrease. Your income will generally increase even though your expenses have decreased, because you can use the money you gain from sales to stock up on goods, thus reducing the cost of that good later down the line. Each good you sell will have a special skill that it can do for you in your store. You can make this special ability good for your customers. Your customers will be happy if you can do something and will be more likely to purchase that good if you can do it. You can also purchase new cities and towns by spending money. This will help your store and help you expand your business. Each province has a max of three cities that they want to purchase. You can also name your empire and when your neighbors see your name, they will take the province away from your neighbor and give it to you. You can assign resources to them instead of purchasing the provinces. You can also sell your old goods to other merchants in exchange for money. You can have several stores under your control. Each store will have its own turn based system. There will be things for you to do there as well. By doing the routine tasks, you will gain upgrades that will help you grow your business. You can get new items to give to your customers and you can assign those items to the store. Each store can also have specials each month. The more items you have of a certain item, the more specials you can do to entice your customers to come back to your store. You can also do missions from lords. They will give you missions in exchange for money. You can use this money to create an army to defeat the empire that you are fighting on c9d1549cdd

I was playing Assassin's Creed II during the holidays, and on a flight from Austin to Atlanta, I read a game review for Dead Space on the in-flight entertainment magazine that said it was "Like Splinter Cell, but darker and scarier." Folks, that's right - this is a Splinter Cell. This is a Splinter Cell. This is a game in which you play an ex-Navy Seals black-ops agent who uses an arsenal of firearms to fend off "hackers" or shadowy forces that have been infiltrating secret government facilities to uncover classified information. You know how the plot of Splinter Cell is that the bad guys are after the super-secret files you're guarding? Well, in Dead Space,

Glittermitten Grove & Frog Fractions 2 Description This is basically a walkthrough of the Frog Fractions: 2 Level Pack Game for Nintendo DS. You will be taken through the levels of the game step by step. Play as DJ Woozy or Professor Coulton. DJ Woozy is clearly a DJ. He jams out whilst sending his frog friends. Professor Coulton is a bit more reticent but has a thing for frogs. He enjoys discussing all things frog related. He enjoys life and loves to entertain his friends. DJ Woozy and Professor Coulton walk you through the levels with their musical selections. In level one this includes such titles as The Simpsons and Der Kommissar. Here the players have a choice of four musical services in which to play. You can spin the coin and choose which song you would like to play from. As the game is similar to a Ouija Board. You can try to 'Let the Games Begin', leaving it to fate to decide what song to play from. The game then mimics the normal Ouija game. You need to place your finger on top of the traced line until the board points to the right triangle. If it does point to the right triangle you score points at the end of the level. In level 2 the game plays music and you have to have the lines on the triangle joined by the player numbered two. You need to place your finger on the triangle until each of the player's name is located on a line. This is very difficult because you need to keep your finger still and the lines are usually not very straight. If you release your finger then you will lose points. You can change your line by pressing on the upper triangle. You then begin a line on your own making the game more manageable. Level 3 of Frog Fractions is somewhat more complex. Here you only have one object to connect which is the green triangle located on the board. You have to trace lines between the player 1 and 2 which have not yet been connected. These lines are usually very difficult to connect as you need to trace only one object on a line. This may seem easy at the start however it gets more and more difficult as the game progresses to a point where it seems like the whole board is full of the players to be connected. If you miss too many lines the game will prove too difficult. Level 4 is where things get really difficult. Using your vision you have to connect all
