when a mysterious figure starts to target state alchemists for their sins against god, alchemist edward elric and his brother alphonse are at their most vulnerable, meanwhile the homunculi begin to unveil themselves once again. fullmetal alchemist brotherhood will be directed by the legendary yasuihiro irie, author of the original fullmetal alchemist anime. the series will be based on hiromu arakawa's popular manga series of the same name. irie had been on a hiatus from all anime production since 2003, since leaving gainax after directing the first two seasons of the highly popular neon genesis evangelion. however, gainax was re-formed in 2008 and irie returned to direct the first full season of fullmetal alchemist brotherhood. the series will be produced by bones, who produced the original fullmetal alchemist anime. hiroshi nogizaka, who wrote the original manga, will also be writing the screenplay for the english version. as of now, the english version has not been announced. the series will be an adaptation of hiromu arakawa's popular manga series fullmetal alchemist. the story will be set in the fictional city of amestris, where the alchemists, a group of individuals who perform alchemy, are feared and respected. the first two seasons of the original anime series were directed by the veteran anime director yoshiyuki tomino, who had previously worked at gainax. however, his departure from the industry proved to be very difficult for tomino. tomino had been known for his unique style, in which he would put the character into a stylized setting while focusing on their actions, as opposed to an "action setting.". tomino's departure proved to be very difficult for the development of the series. as a result, it was announced that the series would be created by a new director, yasuihiro irie, who had previously been working in the japanese animation industry at sunrise. however, irie was also a very highly sought after director for anime. irie had first gained fame in the anime industry in 1998, when he directed the original anime series neon genesis evangelion. irie had gone on to direct the highly acclaimed movies death note, eden of the east, and perfect blue, as well as the popular 009-1 and ghost in the shell anime adaptations. in 2003, tomino also left gainax, leaving a power vacuum behind him at the company. irie used this opportunity to gain control over the production of the first fullmetal alchemist anime. irie also gained the backing of producer gen fukunaga, who was very involved in the original production of the anime. while tomino had been the director of the original anime, he was not credited for the screenplay. as a result, it was announced that the screenplay for the english adaptation would be written by the original manga's writer, hiroshi nogi. irie and fukunaga also decided to re-write the entire script and re-work all the scenes to the sound of the tomino's original version. while tomino had come off as a very charismatic character, it was revealed that he was actually very introverted and did not like public speaking. this was why he had chosen to direct the series rather than act as a storyboard artist. the first season of the anime was very successful and tomino's decision to depart from gainax proved to be very beneficial for the future of the franchise. after the first season of fullmetal alchemist brotherhood aired, fukunaga announced that he would be starting his own studio, bones, in order to produce more anime series. this gave irie the chance to direct the second season of the series. the second season of fullmetal alchemist brotherhood proved to be a successful one as well, and gained a large number of fans.
