What's new in Gene Rain:Wind Tower:

DragonScales 5: The Frozen Tomb is a role-playing video game developed by Quantic Dream, which was published by SCE and Namco for the Game Boy Advance in North America and by Namco in Europe. It was released on January 30, 2007 in Japan, and on September 20, 2007 in North America and Europe, for the Game Boy Advance. The game is a direct sequel to DragonScales and is set four years after the events of the previous installment. The game revolves around one of the villager characters, Caleb, who has developed a drinking problem. While out for a drink, he receives a message from the Scepter of Heaven, which is stolen by a mysterious villager, who appears to be a returning castaway from DragonScales. The villager's name is Edwin, who is unlike any other villager that Caleb had met before. After finding the Scepter, Edwin goes on an adventure with Caleb that takes them to an ancient mountain pass that has been sealed by an avalanche. There, Caleb and Edwin have to face the mountain's guardian goddess Epica, who wants to stop them from reaching the Scepter.

Gameplay The game features similar gameplay to DragonScales. In most cases, the game plays exactly the same. There are minor changes to the gameplay as well, however. Mainly, the game had additional ingame abilities, particularly in battle. For example, the alchemy was upgraded so that you can create potions using the alchemy equipment and cast them on the battlefield. In addition, the maps are similar to DragonScales, and are also similar in difficulty to New Super Mario Bros. Wii. Although it is the same game that was released four years prior, it does experience a performance hit from the GameCube architecture compared to DragonScales, which was released for the GameCube and was also developed by Quantic Dream. The word in the official Game Boy Advance news is that this is because the game does use some 3D programming which will give a hit to the visual quality of the game, but for those who own a GameCube, this hit won't be felt.

Plot Caleb Hancock is an elderly music teacher who loves to drink. After a festival, a young lass named Gwen leaves because her father is worried about how much his drinking has been affecting him. Caleb keeps finding Gwen's things around the town and is nervous as to why she is leaving him even though she loves him
