I have tried using this public int Foo() { int returnVal; OperationSuccess = _asyncService.ExecuteWebRequest(URI).Result; if (OperationSuccess) { returnVal = OperationResult.Success; } else { returnVal = OperationResult.Failure; } return returnVal; } However, when I call Foo() from an asp.net mvc view, I get the following error: The method ExecuteWebRequest(URI) has an invalid return type of System.Threading.Tasks.Task A: The error message says it all. ASP.NET is trying to convert the Result property to a Task so it can be captured in the model binding process, but that is not possible. Perhaps you could split your code into two different methods that return different types? Something like: public void DoSomeWork() { string resultString; FetchWorkResult(out resultString); if (string.IsNullOrEmpty(resultString)) { return; } }

System Requirements:

- AMD Athlon 64 X2 dual core or higher - 2GB RAM - 300MB HDD Features: - 8 playable characters - 4 Superweapons Gallery: The X-COM series has had quite a reputation for unique, odd designs of aliens and planets. Among their best entries were X-COM: UFO Defense, a little gem that still has its value today. Now, after years of hibernation, it is finally available on GOG as a complete DRM-free package for Windows and OSX
