* If you only have access to basic image software, check to see whether that program has a basic version or even a starter version. You may be able to use it to save a project and then take it further with Photoshop. * If you want to go the extra mile, you can now purchase packages that offer excellent support to create your finished images. Photoshop Elements (Chapter 4) and Elements School (Chapter 5) offer tutorials and help files for aspiring Photoshop users. ## Choosing a File Type An _image file_ is a collection of color information that's saved as a bitmap. Computer monitors display bits of color as an array of colored dots or squares on a screen, making it easy to see the image as a series of dots. Four common file types are supported by most image editors and software: * Monochrome: Often referred to as a grayscale file, it displays the image in shades of gray. The most common monochrome file type is known as the _L_ or _L_ channel, or the _grayscale_ channel. If you don't know what a monochrome file is or why it exists, you may want to consider experimenting with such files first. * True-color: True-color displays the image in shades of every color that the image contains. A _L_ or _L_ channel file is the most common true-color file type. * RGB: RGB (or _Red, Green, Blue_) color mode displays the image in shades of color that are described in the three key colors: red, green, and blue. Each color channel is assigned a particular number that represents the value of that color. For example, if you have an RGB image with green on the 0-255 scale, the 0 value is pure red, the 127 value is pure green, and the 255 value is pure blue. * CMYK: CMYK (or _Cyan, Magenta, Yellow, Black_) refers to the four colors of the color wheel, as well as colors that light reflects or absorbs. Color printing uses this _color_ channel to create printed colors, such as red, green, and blue. Whether an image is a grayscale or a true-color image, there is a single RGB, CMYK, or L channel file that contains all the information for that image.

In this tutorial, we will show you how to create the water drop text effect in Photoshop Elements 2019. The Photoshop Elements 2019 water drop text effect requires some of the same techniques as Adobe Photoshop, so if you are already familiar with these techniques, then this tutorial should be easy to follow. Creating the Water Drop Text Effect in Photoshop Elements Step 1 Create the Water Drop Text Effect To create the water drop text effect, we will use the special-effects feature found in the Effects panel. Open a new document in Photoshop Elements. Choose Document > New > Image. Click the Elliptical Marquee tool. Click once to create the marquee. Then press Enter to end the marquee. Create a new layer and call it "Water Drop Effect". Create another new layer and call it "Layer 1". Duplicate the "Layer 1" layer. To adjust the flow of the text, select the "Water Drop Effect" layer. Choose Effect > Motion > Show Motion Paths. Press Shift+Ctrl+J (Mac: Shift+Command+J) to copy the layer's motion path. To remove any unnecessary information, create a bevel and emboss layer style. Then choose the layer with the "Water Drop Effect" layer. Choose Edit > Define > Layer Style. This will give you a dialog box similar to the one below. Set the size of the bevel to 5 pixels and the threshold of the emboss to 45%. Press OK to create the bevel and emboss layer style. Step 2 Add a Water Drop Draw a line below the "Layer 1" layer. Rename it "Water Line". Create a new layer and call it "Layer 2". The layer below the "Layer 1" layer must be a new layer. Draw a vertical line with the Elliptical Marquee tool. Delete the line by pressing Backspace. With the "Layer 1" layer still selected, choose Effect > Blur > Gaussian Blur. This should sharpen the "Water Line" layer, but we need to darken the line a little bit, so blur it again to remove the sharp lines. Choose Effect > Blur a681f4349e

a view of the Sun, and, in their own vision, the Bride of Christ, she (the virgin of Mount Sion) should by confession have bound herself to Jesus Christ, her spouse, and she should alone govern herself. But the Gospel alone can instruct the true Christian, and do what must be done to secure his salvation." "Not only is the Word of God, the active principle in the regeneration of man, but this Word is the only word which is known to impart life, and the only words which will not damn and ruin men." And how can a man who does not know his Word be sure what any word, whether true or not, does to his soul? He hears such a word, and it does not do what he expects it to do. His will is not determined by it; he does not submit to its dictates; he does not follow it in its application; his heart does not love it, his conscience does not approve it, his peace is not disturbed by it; he does not realize in himself, by the sight of Christ as Immanuel, the Supreme Being, that he also is one God with him and him with all. The Lord in the Gospel tells us, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit." And so in the heart, Christ is perceived only by the Spirit. The heart sees the Father, as represented by the Spirit, and the heart sees the Spirit as the Father. Therefore, how can you say, "I have Him in my heart"? It is all He, nothing else. The same is true of the Word of God. You cannot hold it in your heart, and in addition you cannot hear it, and you cannot pronounce it, and you cannot apply it to your life. The Word of God is all that we need. We need God's Word and God's Spirit. In the letter of St. Paul to the Galatians, he says, "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live. Now Christ lives in me." And therefore when we say, "I have Christ in my heart," that is not true. Christ lives in all of us through the Spirit. The Spirit dwells in us, by means of the Word. We need God's Word and God's

Q: Best way to add drawable for option menu button in android In Android, I have a layout as such: View view = inflater.inflate(R.layout.activity_home, container, false); return view; In this layout I have an option menu: In the form_menu layout I have a button (for some reason I can't use a TextView here); This button will be used as an indicator that a user has performed a certain task. I don't want to use any kind of image to indicate the button pressed, but I want the button to have a drawable based on some theme, and also have rounded corners. What is the best way to add a drawable/gradient to a button, and maintain the rounded corners? A: Add one, as a background to your "menu button", then apply the same effect to the button itself, in a separate style and drawable resource definition in your styles.xml file. It is a 2 step process: Add your background drawable to the button's background property. Add a style resource to your styles.xml file, and define a custom style for the button, like this: @drawable/green_button_background true 50sp 10dp 10dp
