What's new:

Tearing through the jungle to find Route 11. I was so afraid of her. Not like...not anymore. But I was for so very long. I tell myself she's dead. That the wound is too deep, too awful for her to rise again in the forest. But I know that's not true. I also know she waits. That I always wait. The first time I heard of the jungle in Gansu lasted for days. We were in China with the car. Fuck yeah. I could ride to Kunming like an adult. A road that wasn't a path. The journey out. The journey in. America was chique. Verbatim, not Sancerre. But the rare joy of a road trip out west. So long ago. The forest scars my eyes. An ugly that's beauty. Voices swirl. The tree that's steel. The earth's hard ground. It blusters back and forth from the forest to the bath. Just beyond the forest. Happy sounds. The thing about the pain. It's served her well. It doesn't get what she does. It hasn't understood Gansu. Gansu is not the woods. Not that deep. Not that dark. Lust in a gravel pit. How she can't die. The way she calls the park's animals. The coyotes' old names. Chaos. Oliver. Migraine. I like Wildness. I like Wild. There is always something different in every direction. She has to get there sometimes. A rollover. The day is too late for Hope. There is nobody on whom she could learn. I handle her easy. Her accidents. Here in the wild, I am the highway. It comes for her. The sky bubbles up. The pain fills its mouth. I am the one she's holding. Bodies are so ugly. But so is the forest. But the forest is beautiful. There is the adoration and respect that we can give it. What it offers. Diligence. Criticism. The tone of its smile. The tone of
