Thank you so much.French Senate Passes Law to Halt Water Shortages French senators passed a new law Thursday to cope with a nationwide water shortage. The senate unanimously approved the measure, which would ban most people from using more than 100 liters (about 27 gallons) of water per day, unless they get approval from local authorities. France has battled dry summers for decades. The president decreed three emergency measures for 2011 to stop the crisis but, with the help of opposition senators, found little support in the lower house. The bill will now go
