The present invention generally relates to the field of integrated circuits, and more particularly to storage and transfer of data in the configuration of integrated circuit components. In integrated circuit (IC) or semiconductor technology, the design, manufacture, and testing of semiconductor chips or wafers typically occur in a large semiconductor fabrication plant (fab). To create the ICs, a designer first designs the functionality of the IC on a computer using electronic design automation (EDA) systems. The designer then generates a layout of the IC using a software program. The layout is then transferred to a fabrication facility for creation of several copies, referred to as masks.

Dear Word Detective: I'm a four-time Emmy winner. I have a feeling that what I like best about myself is that I'm a very nice person. Did the fact that I won an Emmy also contribute to my being a very nice person? — Philip Rawlins. I'd say it's a fairly good indicator, Philip, but you missed the part where they told me to play nice. I'm no stranger to the arts, having been a very bright young'un in the Boston area before becoming a world-class food critic in New York. In reality, what do I like best about myself is that I am moderately well-off, I live in an apartment with a dishwasher, I can afford health insurance, and I can drive a car. I spend my time writing about food and enjoying the food writing. I am no stranger to the realities of modern life, which is why you will rarely find me involved in political mudslinging or poking at celebrities. The only

On 30 March 1940, while still stationed at Bardney, Lincolnshire, Spencer ran for the Epsom Royal By-Election - winning with a majority of 3,482 votes over the sitting Tory Member, Sir Hamar Greenwood. Japanese war service

After the outbreak of war with Japan, Spencer commenced a secret mission in Washington, with orders to win support in the United States for a total naval blockade of Japan. Spencer's aim, as he himself admitted later, was "to win the war for the Royal Navy". Spencer's "Washington appeal" was a tour of 14 places in the United States in late 1944 and early 1945, to stress the British point of view on the war, and an invitation extended by Churchill to meet the President, and other public men. The Vice-Admiral's diary made extensive notes on this tour - generally a colourful affair, with "the President reporting to be a poor man" - and, at the request of the Admiralty, he put some of his experiences in his book, Sea Power as a World Force published in 1946. Spencer's appointment as Commander-in-Chief, Far East was made on 2 January 1946, and he took up the position the following month. He received the Japanese Order of the Precious Crown, 3rd Class (in Silver), on 8 February 1946. He paid his farewell visit to Japan with a fleet of twelve vessels on 28 February 1946, after which he made a detailed inspection round the Korean coast until 15 March. During his absence in Washington, during his last winter as C-in-C Far East in December 1944-January 1945, Churchill wrote his "Finest Hour" speech to the World, which came at the height of the U.S. Secretary of State's "Europe first" policy. Later life Spencer retired from his appointment in July 1949, his last job in British Politics being to take a part in the election of a Labour MP in 1959, and he never again held an office. Spencer spent later years writing about the Royal Navy, his particular favourite being the "The Bright Sun of Sea Power" (1945), a biography of Admiral Sir Jackie Fisher. He was knighted in the 1955 New Year Honours. He died in London, on 21 August 1955 at the age of 74. See also Mr. Prime Minister (film) References External links
