The server is running Nginx. The logs are logging them correctly. However, the logs show that the user-agent (chrome or IE) has an ip-address. Firefox users (and I can guess Safari too) are seeing the page correctly as well as many other devices. On the other hand IE users and chrome ones can not see the page. I've tried a bunch of headers, but with no success. Users are using IPv6. Before all of these checks if I've done, the httpd.conf had been modified (I've changed it to point to the real ip address instead of the public one) and we don't think that the httpd.conf is the issue. Looking for a solution, I've just changed the files of one of the users, and change the ip address too. This did not solve the issue. Someone can help me? Below is the real log from the server. apache_access.log 2011/04/28 20:58:33] 192.168.30.1 GET /twitter.js 204 240 The html looks like this download.rar.
