Q: Why does a lagging determinant increase as the matrix gets larger? I've been playing around with a determinant involving a lagging matrix, and it seems to be increasing with size.

It follows a pattern where it stays below $1$, then it tends to increase (predictably) to around $2$ or $3$, then it jumps to $4$ or $5$ and then decreases back to around $2$ or $3$. Here is the code I used to generate the data:
 $f[n_] := 1/(n + 1)$
 $c[n_] := f[n] + f[n + 1]$
 $d[n_, j_] := (-1)^j c[n - j] c[n + j]$
 $g[n_] := Table[d[n, j], {j, 1, n}]$
I'm interested in the sum of the elements of the last column of a given matrix g . Here is an example output:
0.256536 0.216836
0.174584 0.158384 0.154079 0.152448 0.149565 0.147988 0.145725 0.142599
0.138167 0.134884 0.132466 0.131173 0.128533 0.125129 0.123696 0.122683
0.121729 0.120836 0.120035 0.118895 0.117779 d0c515b9f4

I tried to find anything on the web. I looked through the TORCH folder and found webrec.cab and webrec2.0.bat files. I looked inside webrec.cab, but nothing that appeared to be useful to me. Both files show that they were signed with a non-microsoft certificate. I signed them with my own certificate, which is a Microsoft issued certificate. Do I still have to go to the Microsoft CA site and pay $350 to get a new certificate to use with webrec? A: Signing the file with a non-Microsoft certificate means that the file is not digitally signed. That makes it so that malware cannot be excluded as the cause of the issue. As far as the CA is concerned, the matter is settled. There is nothing they can do. So no, your certificate is not going to be rejected based on that. You are going to have to get a new one. } } cursor.close(); return result.toString(); } @Override public int deleteAll() { SQLiteDatabase db = dbHelper.getWritableDatabase(); return db.delete(TABLE_NAME, null, null); } @Override public boolean isOpen() { return dbHelper.isOpen(); } @Override public Cursor query(Uri uri, String[] projection, String selection, String[] selectionArgs, String sortOrder) { SQLiteDatabase db = dbHelper.getWritableDatabase(); Cursor cursor = db.query(TABLE_NAME, projection, selection, selectionArgs, null, null, sortOrder); cursor.setNotificationUri(getContext().getContentResolver(), uri); return cursor; }
