Painting Tools Painting Tools toolbox is a new feature introduced in Photoshop Elements 11. Unlike the other tools, that are present in the Toolbox, the Painting Tools do not feature a title bar with each tool separately. Instead, they feature a tabbed interface similar to Lightroom or The Gimp. Other than this the tools are similar to the Photoshop tools. The difference is that they are not meant to be used for painting. As you can guess they are most useful for creating brushes. The Painting Tools toolbox supports brush size, opacity and color selection for brushes. For every brush you can select different points in the work area to change the values for size and opacity. These points are indicated as semi-transparent circles and these circles expand to change the brush size or opacity. This allows you to increase or decrease the size of the brush by dragging the brush. Each brush is made up of different colors and the color selections that you make in the Painting Tools toolbox do affect the brush size and opacity. You can select colors from the main color selection wheel 05a79cecff just that he could win the nomination and he did, and then there was so many of the moderates that had backed him that they didn't want to see him be president anymore. Bouie: Yeah. I mean, I think if he just accepted the fact that he couldn't win the nomination, and then he also had this idea that he could still run for the Senate or mayor or some other local offices or just senator. He did it during the 1980s. He did it during the 2000s. It didn't work. But clearly, he wanted to make the pivot. He wanted to pivot for sure, and he wanted to pivot for whatever reason. But it was clear that he wanted to pivot, clearly. So, it wasn't just that the primary voters, and the caucus voters, voted against him. I think at some point, he just felt that way about it. Jason Cherkis: So, he never accepted the fact that he lost. And that's where I think in a lot of ways, people were affected by whether or not they thought he accepted it or didn't accept it or rationalized it. My question is with that pivot, what was the time line? How much did the rest of the staff see it happen in real time, and then how much, was it a top-down process? Bouie: Yeah. Well, we saw it play out. And at the same time, we saw what an incredibly isolated and lonely man he was. That he couldn't deal with. He was so trapped by his own mind. And he wanted to be such a big deal that the other day, when I was talking to him about giving the speech, he was like, "Well, I'm going to give a speech." And I was like, "Yeah, but I mean, what are you going to talk about?" And he was like, "Well, I'm going to talk about my mom." So, he never accepted the loss. Then he also had this incredibly tyrannical leadership style where he would go into these meetings, and he would always be like, "I'm going to impose my will." And that's how I think the staff was just constantly wondering like, "OK, this is a man who we need to get out of office as soon as possible, or do something." And so, that was when there was a
