Getting the basics The tools in this book are all about altering images in the computer, and they apply to any photo with an image (or _layer_) or selection in it. Because they work with a raster image, you can edit an image in any format, including JPEG, TIFF, Adobe's RAW format (usually a file that's a combination of RAW and JPEG), or a special RAW format used by specific cameras. Many cameras record images with a _depth channel,_ which, as the name implies, comes at the same time as the color channels, typically in addition to a monochrome channel. This depth channel affects the picture in terms of depth, so you can use it to add background or to eliminate objects that aren't close enough to the subjects of your picture. Chapter 6 includes a detailed discussion of depth. Most cameras include a digital zoom feature that you can use to capture a wider angle of view. For most people, the best results are achieved when using a camera's native or digital zoom with lenses with a focal length of

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for fabricating a semiconductor device, and more particularly, to a method for fabricating a capacitor for a semiconductor device. 2. Description of the Prior Art Dynamic random access memory (DRAM) cell refers to a semiconductor memory which stores data through capacitance changes. A DRAM cell usually includes a source region, a drain region, a control gate, and a capacitor. As the dimensions of a DRAM cell decrease, the ability of the capacitor to retain stored data also decreases. This is because a reduced capacitor area leads to a reduced electric field between a storage node of the capacitor and a cell plate. The decreased storage node capacitance results in a much higher possibility of charge leaking from the storage node of the capacitor to a storage node contact. In order to prevent charge leaking from the storage node of the capacitor, a storage node contact having a high dielectric constant and a large capacitance is required. A high dielectric constant material, like Ta₂O₅, is often adopted in the capacitor of the DRAM cell. However, in a conventional method for forming a Ta₂O₅ capacitor, one metal layer and two Ta₂O₅ layers are needed to form the storage node. The conventional process for forming a capacitor will be illustrated with reference to FIGS. 1A to 1C. FIGS. 1A to 1C are cross-sectional views showing a conventional method for fabricating a capacitor for a semiconductor device. Referring to FIG. 1A, a buffer oxide layer 12 is formed on a substrate 10. Then, a doped polysilicon layer 13 is formed on the buffer oxide layer 12. Thereafter, photoresist is patterned to expose the upper surface of the doped polysilicon layer 13 (see FIG. 1B). The exposed doped polysilicon layer 13 serves as a storage node and a cell plate of a capacitor. Referring to FIG. 1C, the doped polysilicon layer 13 is etched to form a storage node 14. After forming an insulating layer 15 on the resultant structure, a capacitor of a DRAM cell is formed. During the above process, the sidewalls of the storage node 14 are usually not sufficiently straight. As a result, the length of the storage node 14 is very short. Furthermore, the exposure of the doped polysilicon layer 13 affects the electrical properties of the capacitor, resulting

The man behind "Spring Breakers," a film about a group of young partygoers who stumble upon a drug deal, was arrested this week for an alleged sex crime, possibly involving children. James Franco, who also starred in another racy movie set in a seedy 1970s Miami Beach called "The Broken Lizard Ghostbusters," was arrested for allegedly molesting a 15-year-old boy in a Los Angeles apartment in 2013. "Authorities learned about the alleged crime late last week and we were notified today," a Disney spokeswoman said. "James is deeply remorseful and apologizes to the victim and his family. This behavior is wholly unacceptable and James understands that it is his responsibility to be mindful of what comes with being an ordained Catholic priest." A spokesman for the Los Angeles Archdiocese confirmed Saturday the allegations were being investigated. "We are making no further comment at this time," said the spokesman, the Rev. Christopher Coyne. The Southern California Catholic News Agency reported that Franco's arrest was triggered by a text message and an ensuing meeting with the police. "The text message reportedly referenced sexual activity between the teen and his older friend," the paper said. "The complaint was not an accusation of criminal activity," the paper said. The accusers told the paper one of them was a relative of the priest and the other was the friend. Both were from Texas, the paper said, and the accuser who was the priest's relative said she believed the priest and priest's friend knew each other. "There are a lot of people who knew," she told the paper. "I am so hurt for those kids because they are victims, too, at least I think they were." Franco was released on $2,500 bail. He told the paper on Friday that he had no comment on the case. A voicemail left with a publicist Friday for the actor was not immediately returned. On "Breakout Kings," Franco plays a famed race car driver who walks the line between fame and madness and comedy. The movie was a box office hit, but it was a troubled production. The Los Angeles Times reported that Director-screenwriter Chris Bender was fired in 2010 after a dispute with Franco. Bender was replaced on the project by Jerry Bruckheimer, the producer of "Pirates of the Caribbean" and "The Lone Ranger." Franco also has a secret life. He is also an ordained Catholic priest and a former member
