it safe to skip empty network folders when publishing on npm I'm working on packaging a node app for npm.

The app has multiple node modules and I am thinking of publishing the dist folder with node-deduplicate which appends the package.json files to the root folder. The problem is that npm sometimes doesn't publish the folders if they are empty and I have to manually run a script to push this folder and its files on my repo. Is it ok if I don't push the empty folders? A: With the push that should happen automatically. The reason for that is that the push targets one of the folders (basically any subfolder of the package.json folder), and it will use the package.json in that folder. For

Autodesk 3ds Max 2017Q: Please review my back-end server architecture I'm designing my first back-end server architecture for an app I'm designing. I would really appreciate comments from people who know more about architecture than I do. I am trying to design a server that will fetch and store data so that it will work in any computer with an internet connection. My idea is to have a server app that allows several clients to connect to the server (using websockets) and

request information (database) and store it to disk. This is what I've come up with, any suggestions are more than welcome. Source of data -- A Node.js server A web server (Nginx) to route the requests to the Node.js server A database server and app to host the database I'm planning to implement a key-value store to store data that will be persisted to disk or memory. I am not planning to use the database server for anything. Emitted data -- I have chosen to use Socket.IO to handle websockets connections and JSON to store and emit data. If this is an unacceptable architecture feel free to tell me and I will revise. I'm just so new at this. Best, Peter A: I like your approach to solving the problem. I would add an additional layer on top of your stack that would be a firewall that would protect your server from unwanted connections. There are open source projects like iptables that will allow you to do this easily. You could also get a commercial solution that will have this built in. The other thing I would do is run your node application on a load balancer of some type so that you can evenly distribute the requests to your servers. Adenoid cystic carcinoma of the head and neck: the role of adjuvant radiation. Between 1973 and 1982 the medical records of 57 patients with adenoid cystic carcinoma of the head and neck, treated at the University of Kansas Medical Center, were reviewed to determine the impact of radiotherapy on local control and survival. Thirty-six patients received post-operative radiotherapy alone. The remaining 21 patients received radiotherapy following the excision of a recurrence. Our results suggest that radiation therapy
