Fighter 7.3.0.5801.Q: Why do I get an error when calling grep from a Bash script? I'm calling grep as a subprocess from my bash script, and it works fine when I call it from the command line, but when I call it from my script it throws an error. Here's my script: `#!/bin/bash echo 'Start' grep 'one' /tmp/file.txt | sort | uniq echo 'End'` When I run it, I get the following error: line 57: uniq: command not found I'm testing this on Ubuntu. A: You need to call it as `grep 'one' /tmp/file.txt | sort | uniq` instead of `uniq | grep 'one' /tmp/file.txt | sort` The report is a national benchmarking report that benchmarks the overall literacy achievement of all students in grades K-12 throughout the country and in every state by grade level, including the accountability needs assessment (for grades 3, 5, and 8) and communication assessment (grades 1 and 4). See summary chart Download chart (PDF). Click on image to expand. You may also view this document online. Purpose The purpose of the report is to serve as a tool to analyze student-level data at the national and state levels to: Provide educators with information they need to meet the literacy needs of all students; Identify and show the quality of programs and services needed to achieve the literacy goals for all students; Provide an opportunity for states to evaluate and improve their programs and services for students; Clarify the high-quality instructional practices that produce the best results for all students; Provide an accountability measure for early childhood programs;
