They weren't really a comedy team, although I thought it was funny that they were in the movies. In truth there were only four members: Moe, Larry and Curly, and during WWII Moe would often proclaim, "Curly, your face is soft!" As seen in a few cartoons of the comedy team it was Moe, Curly, and Larry. After that, I doubt I'd ever heard the name, Curly, or at the least, their comic characters until a few years ago when I saw a game in Walmart called, The Three Stooges. The game was played from a board, and just like the old movies when talking to a Russian audience Moe would often say, "Fridy-ididy" and Curly would squeak out, "Yes-weisy," producing hilarious sounds. Sadly, it wasn't playable, and you couldn't even play the game without a companion for the game. I know what you're saying, "How could the game company even think that a stooging trio would actually, even in a joke, be played the names of the actors?" A friend said it was funny because it had the names of the actors in it, and it was so bad you didn't even know it was bad. I figured, if anything it was sad how so many people didn't even know what it was. Brilliant and professional company, Golden Frog,* has seen the potential in it, and nowadays their plan for the Stooges

Free Fantasy General II [Win/Mac]

Deadly Cosmic is a short, but fun game inspired by the horror games from the 90s. It is a great way to relax between games, but it can be played just once, too. If you like Dead Space or Halloween: The Madness you will not be disappointed. It was developed for the Unreal Engine Unity, with great attention to details. It has a nice soundtrack and a nice graphic, but it needs a little bit of work. Every entity has a unique AI behaviour, so you can really explore the environment for hours. Permissions: You are given the opportunity to play an optional disclaimer video after the game starts. It does not interfere with the main gameplay. This option is optional and I do not really recommend to use it, but please play and don't be sad if you don't have any warning videos! ---- CONNECT WITH OTHER PEOPLE! Following the honeymoon, the government will be introducing measures to ensure that online platforms are responsible for their content and that internet providers are responsible for how they deliver it. As he explained in May this year, the government is taking steps to force internet service providers to be responsible for "what people are doing on the internet" - not just the networks - and wants online platforms to set up and act within systems to "prevent illegal content and harmful behaviour". "This includes steps to ensure ISPs and online platforms take responsibility for their own content, block illegal content, and prevent harmful behavioural practices," it says.

Despite being one of the most dramatic and successful songs in pop music history, "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" is more commonly associated with mania rather than the other side of that coin: depression. Back in the '60s, Judy Garland was flirting with a diagnosis of bipolar disorder, and I remember months of school in the 1970s being haunted by Lionel Bart's "The Story of Adele H." The song served as a cautionary tale about a fast-talking woman who dies a spectacular and painful death by jumping out of a window, and was the perfect "signpost" for the debilitating mental illness that I would later come to know firsthand. Although I never
