How likely is it that you'll recommend this post to a friend? The main problem of companies that operate with a multiple-account system is that each account requires a different username and password. A user should know the information of each account. But, the password must be in a safe place that it can be remembered. A better solution is the password manager. It is a place where all the information you need is stored in your computer. The password manager can store not only passwords, but also credit cards, birthdates, security codes, and other important data that you need to be easy to remember. You don't need to memorize all the passwords for every website. You can use a single password for all your accounts and not have to worry about losing your sensitive information. In this guide, you will learn how to create a password manager on your computer. Create a password manager: The first step is to create a directory on your computer where you want to store the files. The directory will not be visible to anyone because it will be located on the system drive. The best place for the directory is the C drive because all the programs are installed on the C drive. Select the C drive from the Computer icon and click on the directory option. Click on New and create a new
