Adobe Premiere Elements License Key has a program monitor with the essential. HDD: 7.4; Display: 1280 x 720; Windows Media Player; DirectX 9.Q: How to copy a row from one matrix to another matrix? So I have a very large matrix of sound data of about 130,000,000 (130 million) samples and I want to copy each and every sample from a smaller matrix called 'data' to the larger matrix. Currently the command I am using is as follows % Copy the data rows into the larger matrix data = zeros(size(data,1),1); for i = 1:size(data,2) data(i,:) = data(i,:); end I have tried different approaches however this one seems to be working. I'm not sure of what else could be done though. Does anyone have a better idea or point out if my loop is improper? UPDATE: Added an s for the size of 'data' and also confirmed the size of the elements in 'data' are correct. A: You can write a single line loop to copy the first row in a column - given the array x and the column's index: x = [1 2 3 4]; x(:,2) = []; Now x(:,2) is empty. To copy the remaining rows just overwrite x(:,2). Edit: This does use linear memory (i.e., it does not use the fact that the data is stored in a column-first array). If that's not the case, then create a copy with x = x(:,1), and copy the first row of that. Q: sprintf("%d", C99)? Is there anything like sprintf("%d", C99)? That is, to pass a compile-time constant to a function (I'm using C++ in a static-analysis environment, so it's worth using type safety, of course), but in a portable way? I mean
