These free download links are for the software packages which are in current public use. for details). The episode was covered in the soap opera "All My Loving". When the song was played during the actual wedding itself, Barbara Lyons (Carole) screamed "Stop, don't play that song!" This was played at the wedding of Howard and Sarah's first daughter, Meghan. In my party-line version of the story, the DJ was worried that the song might be upsetting to the bride (I don't know if it was the song or the wedding where she was the wedding that upset her). The crowd began to storm the DJ booth, and the DJ, in order to protect himself, turned the song off before the dance floor cleared. The crowd was furious and declared a three-day slow dance marathon, which of course they were successful in completing. This was played at my wedding when I was confronted in the hall during the meal with the question, "What time is the dance?" I am sometimes unclear about the exact wording of this question and the fact that my family and friends have asked it. It might even be asked of the very sad, the very hurt, the very angry or the very frightened. I hope that readers are able to understand why "What time is the dance?" is a line in a movie that is meant to be played when the bride is about to leave a wedding. Again, I don't know if I am being completely accurate. All the facts come from various notes I took during the wedding, from watching
