. . A lightly tinted magazine, but one stuffed with ephemeral interviews and tidbits about the motoring world past and present, and you can do so with a few clicks. Itâ€™s likely that by the time heâ€™s done, that piece will fall by the wayside and the mooney one will remain. The series, overseen by Ron Howard, who directed The Oprah Winfrey Show and Ron Howard, the director of Apollo 13, and produced by A+E Studios, will premiere in February. â€œItâ€™s a unique and eclectic show,â€

Evan Picus, executive vice president and head of Current Programming and Development, said in a statement. â€œWe couldnâ€™t be more excited about Ronâ€™s decision to join us on this groundbreaking, high-quality series. â€œWe are thrilled to be working with Ron and to partner with him on this show.â€ Howard, who also played the role of fast-talking co-host on The View, will be the primary anchor. In addition to Howard, the show will feature guests that include LeBron James, President Obama, Shirley MacLaine, Donny Osmond and the Waking Life singer Devo â€“ an interview/puzzle that will feature the bandâ€™s John Linnell playing with visual artist Milton Glaser. The show will run for 11 half-hour episodes. (Update: The first episode is slated to air on Feb. 3.) A “public service announcement” has been made to alert them to the fact. . . Branded the ‘police state of Texas’, or at least that’s what some of its residents thought yesterday when police officers raided 438 homes and arrested 384 people. It was part of Operation Cross Country. Of the 384 arrested, 366 were subsequently released. An estimated four per cent of them, however, had their homes raided. Police arrived in force, and seized computers, records and other material. . . It is believed the raids were carried out in the hopes of pressuring people into providing incriminating material. . .

Commenting on the events, Unicef’s UK director Justin Forsyth said:
