Because of this, the performance of these pieces of equipment has been steadily improving, driving down the cost, and increasing their applicability. With this trend, systems that are capable of high speed imaging are increasingly desirable. One way to increase the speed is to increase the resolution. Other methods for increasing the speed include using a shorter wavelength light source for the exposure. This shortens the exposure time, allowing more frames to be captured at one time. A common type of photographic exposure is the raster scan. With raster scan photography, the optical exposure is along a line, d0c515b9f4
