The user inputs a value which I have to find out which range contains it. I can use Arrayfun to do this: % Some initialization a = [100 0.2 0.4 0.6 0.8]; b = [100 0.8]; [~,~] = arrayfun(@(x) find(a == x),b) This works fine for static arrays. However when I change a and b so that a contains new values like: a = [100 0.2 0.4 0.8 0.9 0.2 0.3 0.4 0.5 0.6]; I get a warning telling me that an array is being passed to a function that has incompatible dimensions. I assume this is because a has a dimension of 1, while b is of size 2. If this isn't possible, I have also tried finding the column index of the array with the index of b, but I am getting an error saying that values do not match as expected. Error using horzcat The following error(s) occurred during execution of X:\...\script.m: Undefined function or variable 'aIndex'. Error in horzcat (line 62) [horzcat(b([aIndex,:]),a(aIndex))] = unix2datetime([horzcat(b([aIndex,:]),a(aIndex))]); What would be the best approach to doing this? A: Instead of searching for the indices
