It's been a few months since I last updated and I think many of you have been a little busy too. To celebrate, I'm finally back to do some updates again. I have not forgot how busy the life in my hands can be. So don't expect me to have frequent updates anymore. I am going to try my best to at least once a week. I know it's been a I-O-N-G time since I updated. but please know that I am very busy and that I can only update the game at my own free time. Please know it's not because I don't want to. . . . UFC Undisputed 3 PC.Q: Unable to create VLANs on Cisco 7200s-48ps I have a HP Elitebook 840 G3 running Slackware 14. My network is a mix of MikroTik and Cisco wireless routers and switches. The wireless routers seem to be handled okay, I have one in the living room connected to my DSL modem, and I can use that fine. I can even connect to it without any problems. The issue is that some of the other routers, which should be interfaces for my HP's various VLANs, seem to refuse to let me join them. I can't see them on any of the HP's VLANs, and I can't connect to them at all. It looks like I need to be in WDS mode, or something, for the HP to recognize them, but doing so produces a very odd error on the HP: "cisco.wss1: WSS Not Connected WSS1 UPnP isn't currently supported with this device. Please ensure that UPnP is configured correctly for this model. . Note: UPnP will be unsupported with future firmware updates for this model. " I know the Cisco's do this, because I can't join them either. If I try to join the VLANs, the HP will tell me that the IP addresses aren't routable, and then I can't access the page where I try to do the VLAN configuration. The HP says that there are no IP conflicts with any of the Cisco's, but obviously that's not the case. They're identical Cisco 3750's. I know the Cisco's have no problem configuring a proper VLAN because they're all part of the same VLAN in the MikroTik's
