.Q: Running multiple kafka streams together I have 2 streams(CountStream,SumStream) with different processors/transformers as mentioned below. Is there any easy way to run both of them together with some processor like join or combine? Stream 1 .flatMap(x -> x.getBytes().toString().split("\\s+")) //Performs on the output of this stream will be completely different and will add up the count values for every line .print() //print the count .transform(new TextSummaryTransformer("test", "to-be-added")) //output the count but finally sum up all the count values .process(new TextSummaryProcessor()) //Performs to sum up the count value .to("kafka:localhost:9092") //kafka topic to which the key should be send Stream 2 .flatMap(x -> x.getBytes().toString().split("\\s+")) .print() //print the count .transform(new TextSummaryTransformer("test", "to-be-added")) .print() //print the count .process(new TextSummaryProcessor()) .print() //print the sum .to("kafka:localhost:9092") A: The short answer is no. What you could do is group data from both streams by count and sum using the same processor

as in Stream 1 If you do want to combine multiple streams, you could use union, in which case you'll have to decide if you want to keep the data in two streams with the identical contents or you could join the two streams and merge them. There's also a JoinProcessor that combines two streams in its join method. Q: How to distinguish between focused controls and non-focused? We have a form with a parent panel control. The panel is in two areas of the form. It appears in the window in two places (the top left and bottom right halves). I want to distinguish between the two areas. The top left panel is where the focus is and the bottom right panel is where the focus is not. We are unable to get a handle on the various properties of the panels that are available. Is there any easy way to differentiate between them? A: You can actually do it yourself. In general 79a2804d6b
