***Organizing Files:** To organize files, use the `_source_` and `_destination_` boxes in the Presets window (B). Specify which folder you want to store the file in, and Photoshop creates the `_source_` folder. If you already have a folder with the same name, Photoshop creates that folder and moves your file to it. In the dialog box, you can choose where to save the file if you're not using the Photoshop default folder. If you're importing a collection of files, just hit OK when the dialog box prompts you to save the file in the same folder as the original file. * As you use the various tools that Photoshop offers, you can save a standard set of presets that you can access through the `_Presets_` utility tab. To create a preset, first select a tool and a working area. Select the same tool again to save it. Choose File | New from the top menu and choose `_Preset_` at the top of the dialog box. Choose the `_Preset_` tab and click the plus sign (+) to add the tool to the Presets panel. You can now access it easily by selecting it from the list in the bottom left corner of the Presets window. Figure 2-12 shows a few of the standard presets that come with Photoshop. I'm now going to show you how to quickly create a gradient overlay in Photoshop. A gradient overlay is basically any kind of pattern you can think of on top of an image. It can be used to create a background for logos, headers, text boxes and for virtually any reason you can imagine. The technique is easy and just requires you to paint a quick gradient with the Paint Bucket Tool, then simply click inside your image and it creates the gradient for you. Now let's take a look at the video. It is time to get started. The first thing you need to do is paint your gradient with the Paint Bucket Tool. Then we are going to use the Type tool to type the text that we would like the overlay to say. Once you've added the text, position it anywhere you'd like and change the size as you see fit. This is also a great opportunity to modify the text to make it any color that you like. Lastly, resize the type to fit the image and add a drop shadow using the properties panel. This is a basic gradient overlay, but you can easily adjust the settings to make it look better. This is all you need to do. When you are ready, just click OK and that's it! It is time to go. In my script I want to check, if a string contains the command for the multiple lines, and not only the line ( ).... But Javascript allows the use of m for the m option, but what does that really do? var regex = new RegExp( '+', 'g') if(regex.test(str)) console.log(str); A: That's multiline mode. It allows the pattern to match one of more newlines (that is a newline character plus anything or nothing). Q: JavaScript - incrementing a JS variable in a particular case I have two similar JS variables, each starting at 0. I want to increment the second variable by 1 in a particular case (a condition fulfilled). I don't want to do a reassignment in that case. In Java, I would declare an int variable, increment it in the beginning (at the start of the method for instance), and use the initial value in the condition. In JS I can only use a conditional statement. I tried this: a = a || 0; a++; if (a > 0) { // a doesn't get incremented } but I can't get the above behavior. Can someone help me? A: This is correct: a = a || 0; This doesn't change a, it initializes a (because a isn't declared) with a value of 0. It just says, "If a is not defined, initialize a to 0". The assignment to a after is redundant, as it is an assignment to a (which hasn't been previously assigned) and thus
